Write an introduction to a blog post titled "How to Make a Bulletproof IDentification Card". In today's world, identifying yourself is as easy as scanning your driver's license and taking a selfie. With biometrics becoming more and more mainstreamed, even countries like Russia are embracing fingerprint identification for citizens. While this may seem anti-democratic at first, the use of fingerprints for identification has greatly increased security throughout the country. It is crucial that you keep your identity secure at all times, especially in today's modern society.

Your Identity Protecting your identity is of paramount importance. No matter what you do, there will always be the potential for identity theft. All it takes is for one person to get a hold of your social security number and they can start using it to wreak havoc on your life. Even if you don't think that this sounds like a big deal, having someone use your SSN to open credit cards and make unauthorized purchases can drastically harm your credit score and put you in some serious debt. You should also be wary of anyone that asks for your credit card number. While this may be normal when buying items online, you should only ever give out your credit card information if you are purchasing something from a trusted source, such as an actual store or official website. Keep in mind that protecting your identity goes much further than just protecting your SSN. You should never put any sensitive information online in the hopes of protecting yourself in the future. While this may seem like a good idea in theory, it is much easier for someone to steal this information instead of gaining access to it through other means. This especially applies to social media sites, where there are many tools that can be used to gather large amounts of information about you. By logging into your social media account and then changing your password, you will greatly increase the difficulty of getting access to your information. What makes a good ID card? While there are many ways to pad out an identity card and make it look like a real identification card, there is always a chance that something could be missed and someone could be able to bring the deception to light. The major goal of any identity card should be to make it as easy as possible for the user to identify him or herself. There are two major components of an identity card that must be considered. While the first component of an identity card is quite obvious, it can be overlooked if not put into consideration. The first component is the front side of the card. This should consist of a picture that clearly displays your name, address, and other information requested by law enforcement or government agencies. The easiest way to ensure that your personal information is easily recognizable is to take a picture with your phone or digital camera. This will not only ensure that your details are visible, but it will also help avoid future replacements if you need to make changes, such as to fix the name written on the card or change addresses.
